New publishing platform

In 2021 Sciendo launched the new publishing platform, featuring some of the most advanced publishing solutions available currently in the industry. The improved speed allows users to browse the content faster than ever, and the refreshed and modern design provides more intuitive interaction with the pages and web components. We decided to make this significant step in order to keep up with ever-changing technology and its increasing demands, as well as the new requirements of our publishing partners, including abstracting and indexing services.

The technological advancement created some unexpected errors during the introduction phase, some of which may have affected your journal.

We would like to thank you for your understanding and ongoing support in the process and apologise for any inconvenience caused. We would also like to underline that we value your suggestions, so please do not hesitate to contact us with a proposal, as this will help us to shape our publishing technology even more.

Journal Citation Indicator

In 2021 Clarivate introduced a new metric called Journal Citation Indicator, a field-normalized measurement of journal citation impact.

The Journal Citation Indicator has been calculated for all journals in the Web of Science Core Collection, including those that do not have the Impact Factor. As a result, journals indexed in The Emerging Sources Citation Index have become available in the Journal Citation Reports and have received their own citation metric for the first time.

There are several key differences between the Journal Citation Indicator and the Impact Factor:

- the Journal Citation Indicator's calculation on three years of publications contrasts with the two-year window employed for the JIF.
- the Impact Factor calculation is based on citations made in the current year, while the Journal Citation Indicator counts citations from any time period following publication, up to the end of the current year.

Sciendo's technical team is in process of adding the metric to your journal's website. Below, you can find the details regarding the Journal Citation Indicator obtained by your title.

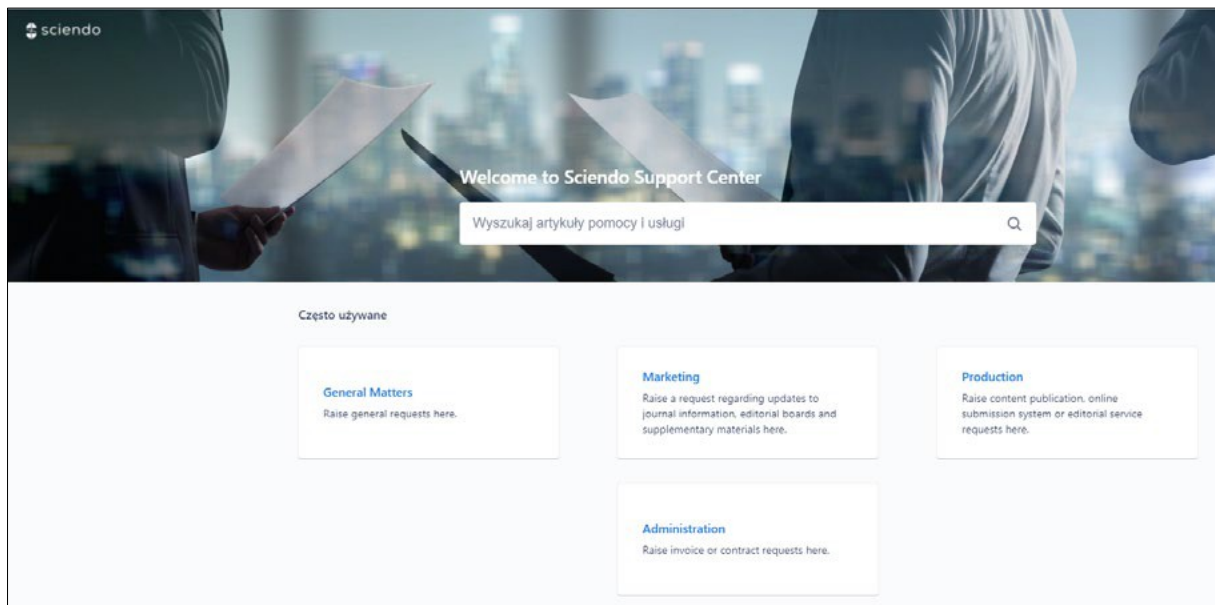

Sciendo Support Centre

Sciendo is constantly working on improving the services provided. Therefore, another new solution has been implemented and provided for the Editors to use - Sciendo Support Centre. Sciendo Support Centre is a dedicated tool for reporting and tracking requests, questions and problems.

Tickets might be logged in two simple ways:

- 1) Via regular email sent to support@sciendo.com. The system registers the notification as a new ticket and sends confirmation to the sender.
- 2) Via service desk available at <http://support.sciendo.com> that provides a selection of categories to choose from. Service desk requires a completion of the online inquiry form.

Once a new ticket is logged in, Sciendo's Customer Service assigns it to the exact person responsible for solving the specific issue. The system not only helps both parties to avoid exchanging of unnecessary e-mails, but also provides up to-date information on what stage the reported problem currently is at.
